

Aboriginal Consulting Services

Finalist for the SaskEnergy Award for Aboriginal Business

Originally created to help companies hire and retain Aboriginal employees by delivering Aboriginal Awareness Seminars, Aboriginal Consulting Services (ACS) later created the newspaper Eagle Feather News which has covered the Aboriginal community for 12 years. With a business and career section, and regular features of successful Aboriginal businesses and people, Eagle Feather News succeeds in promoting employment and business activity in Aboriginal communities.

ACS's John Lagimodiere has delivered awareness training and helped with strategic planning for doing business with Aboriginal communities with numerous businesses and organizations, and has served on several boards to participate in and promote the development of Aboriginal employment and business.

Lagimodiere believes that engaging the Aboriginal community in the business, employment and social fabric of Saskatchewan is imperative to the future. He knows the province needs new business opportunities, and through ACS and Eagle Feather News, John is working to help the Aboriginal community fulfill this need.
